GEORGE M. COHAN (Music and Lyrics)

His statue graces Times Square. This extraordinarily prolific showman accomplished more in his 64 years

(July 4, 1878 - November 5, 1942) than can be encompassed in any single book, play, or film. He wrote hundreds of spiritlifting songs, wrote or co-wrote more than 50 plays, and produced or co-produced more than 80 plays. The zesty, fast-paced shows he created and starred in provided the foundation for modern musical comedy. His Playbill biography for his final musical noted he was "perhaps the best beloved and most popular of all American players... He has been awarded the accolade of first actor by practically all the leading critics."

Cohan was the first member of his profession ever honored with the Congressional Medal.

CHIP DEFFAA (Writer, Stage Director) is an ASCAP Award winner who has written 20 plays, published 8 books, and has produced 31 albums. For 18 years, he wrote about entertainment

- including music and theater - for

The New York Post. He's written for Entertainment Weekly, Down Beat, Jazz Times, and other magazines. A graduate of Princeton University, he's long been a trustee of the Princeton Tiger Magazine. He's a member of the Stage Directors and Choreographers Society, the Dramatists Guild, and NARAS. He's been ardently researching the life of George M. Cohan since he was nine years old.

A Letter from the Directors

Some fifteen years also, Jon Peterson strutted on our stage tapped his feet and proclaimed himself a real live nephew of his Uncle Sam. He won the hearts of our patrons, acclamation from the critics and all the theatrical award committees were calling his name.

For us back then, we felt on mission - celebrating the endurance of the Irish and Irish-American artists who invented Broadway. George M. Cohan arrived on the coat tails of Irish trailblazers like Dion Boucicault, Harrigan, and Hart, and here he was, brash and unapologetic, giving his regards to Broadway with more than fifty shows.

During the lockdown of the past 18 months, we were intrigued to learn that Mr. Peterson was reimagining his show for film with the conceit that Cohan's ghost was haunting theatres all over town. Cohan had little to interrupt him in his wanderings. Since the only light that illuminated our stage was a "Ghost Light," we invited him down to bask in the glow.

While we fret on whether or when we get back to live theatre, there is something very stirring about the show dancing on - even after the most final of curtains fall.

As the New York Times said in its review in 2006: "Welcome back to Broadway, George, or West 22nd Street which is close enough."

Love,
